GET HYGGE WITH IT

Vintage bargains, fancy food markets and cosy cafes... This is how to spend 48 hours in Aarhus

It's no surprise this Danish city of cool food and art is the European capital of culture

Hard to miss: The Iceberg in Aarhus

At the top of modern art gallery ARoS is a rainbow-coloured, panoramic walkway.

Downstairs is packed with works by artists such as Andy Warhol and Gilbert & George plus Joana Vasconcelos, whose massive fabric creation stretches across the whole building. Entry costs £14.

A 20-minute walk away are more Instagram-worthy sights at Aarhus Ø.

The rejuvenated docklands area is home to The Iceberg, a series of futuristic apartment blocks featuring impressive jagged towers.

Laura gets an art fix at ARoS

It can get chilly, so hunker down in one of Aarhus' many cosy cafe bars for a hot chocolate or mulled wine.

Try Café Jorden on Badstuegade in the Latin Quarter, with its jamming '80s soundtrack, red-painted walls and fairy lights.

Scandi market grub is sure to leave your stomach full

Aarhus has two tasty markets.

Central is the posh one – think super-fresh fish, steak and truffles.

But locals flock to Aarhus Street Food for more affordable eats.

Located in a former bus station, it's home to dozens of trucks selling everything from Vietnamese bánh mì to traditional Danish meatballs, all for just a few quid.

Fancy something more formal? French restaurant Juliette on Jaegergårdsgade dishes up classics like duck confit, with set menus for less than £30.

Sleep Scandi-style

A two-minute walk from the train station and only 10 minutes from the centre is City Hotel Oasia.

The boutique bolt-hole boasts fab Danish design, from poured concrete floors to graphic lampshades.

A buffet breakfast is served every morning and you can help yourself to hot drinks and pastries throughout the day.

Double rooms cost from £110 B&B. Plan your trip at Visitaarhus.com.

We've got Aarhus as one of the top destinations for 2017, to see the others, check out our list.
